The new Argon Laser Putter brings a great high tech look, to the laser putter training world. Our putter was designed to be heavier in weight than traditional and most modern designs of today. Research has shown that more head feel in a putter (more head weight) at any length can help players of any skill level smooth out their putting stroke. This weight in the putter head means that putters can be built 30" to 35" without the loss of head feel and without having to add weight to the putter after it has been assembled.

In addition to the heavier weight feature, The Argon Laser Putter has a truly unique and effective alignment system. Each putter has a highly engineered "pronged 3-Laser-system" that you control throughout the entire putting stroke by two hand activated soft sensors that are placed in the putter grip. The top laser rides over top of the ball and fans along the ground towards the intended target line and the other two lasers run parallel to each other giving you a track like visual that enables you groove a square stroke that allows you to make those all important six footers. Using the Argon laser putter to train helps you to build muscle memory which you can take to the course and apply what you've learned with your own putter. Combine all this technology with the 3-laser-system, face balanced and high MOI (moment of inertia), and you have a great technological training system at a great price.
